

FLOOD ADVISORY

Date : July 25, 2009

Time : 6:45 PM

Issued To : Municipalities, Local Conservation Authorities, Local Police, Emergency Services,
School Boards and Media

Toronto and Region Conservation advises that the Weather Office is forecasting the potential for thunderstorms and rain showers for the Greater Toronto Area. The downtown Toronto has already recorded 37 mm of rain over two hours. There is a potential of additional rainfall amounts for tonight and tomorrow.

The rivers and streams are already running at high levels due to the precipitation that fell over the past two days, and should be considered dangerous. A high potential for flooding of low-lying areas exists. Also, the forecasted rainfall amounts may create street flooding and sewer surcharging. Please exercise caution when driving and avoid low-lying roadways and underpasses.

The TRCA will continue to closely monitor weather conditions and will issue an update or cancellation to this Advisory by 10:00 PM on Saturday, July 25, 2009.
