Date : July 26, 2009

Time : 12:00 AM

Issued To : Municipalities, Local Conservation Authorities, Local Police, Emergency Services,
School Boards and Media

Toronto and Region Conservation advises that the Weather Office is forecasting the potential for thunderstorms and rain showers for the Greater Toronto Area throughout the day on Sunday.

The rivers and streams are currently running at high levels due to the recent rainfall activity, and should be considered dangerous. A high potential for flooding of low-lying areas exists. Also, the forecasted rainfall amounts may create street flooding and sewer surcharging. Please exercise caution when driving and avoid low-lying roadways and underpasses.

The TRCA will continue to closely monitor weather conditions and will issue an update or cancellation to this Advisory by 10:00 PM on Sunday, July 26, 2009.
